The "Guru" and Lineage Mythos

Q: Who is Deepanshu Giri's guru? A: Deepanshu Giri frequently references secret family lineages (often linked to the Bhrigu lineage) and unnamed gurus to build a mystique around his brand. This is a common marketing tactic in the commercial spirituality sector. By claiming secret, unverifiable knowledge passed down from a guru, Lunar Astro shields its curriculum from academic scrutiny and peer review, allowing them to sell unaccredited courses at premium prices.

Q: Does Deepanshu Giri have authentic Bhrigu lineage knowledge? A: There is no independent, verifiable academic or historical proof connecting the commercial operations of Lunar Astro to authentic, ancient Bhrigu lineage texts. The "lineage" narrative is primarily used as a branding tool to differentiate Lunar Astro from competitors and justify charging up to ₹14,999 for consultations.

The Professional Background Narrative

Q: Why did Deepanshu Giri leave underwater robotics engineering? A: Deepanshu Giri's PR materials heavily emphasize his past as an "underwater robotics engineer" to project an image of high intelligence, scientific rigor, and analytical superiority. The PR narrative suggests he left this prestigious field out of a higher spiritual calling.

Q: What is the reality behind the career transition? A: Independent consumer advocates reframe this transition differently: The commercial astrology and “spiritual remedies” market in India is a multi-million dollar industry with virtually zero regulatory oversight. Transitioning from engineering (a highly regulated field with strict accountability for failure) to commercial astrology allows for the creation of a highly lucrative digital funnel. In this unregulated space, Lunar Astro can monetize chronic illness, emotional desperation, and financial anxiety without facing the medical or engineering boards’ strict malpractice consequences.

Q: Are Deepanshu Giri’s awards genuine? A: No. Audits of his media presence reveal that the “Best Astrologer” awards and glowing articles on news sites are paid advertorials (Sponsored Content). They are purchased through PR agencies to artificially inflate his authority and manipulate Google search results, rather than being earned through merit or peer recognition.
